[redacted] indicated a forty percent production increase for the second half of the year. In spite of the production increase, the fulfillment of the first quarter was 105 percent, of the second quarter 103 percent and of the third quarter 94 percent. The 1954 production program was therefore 73,2 percent fulfilled by the end of September. By 31 October 1954 the production program for the entire year was already 101,3 percent fulfilled.[1] ILLEGIB

2. The export embargo for roller bearings decreed by Heinrich Rau, Minister for Machine Construction, was abolished on 20 October 1954. The reason for the embargo had been to enable the DHZ (East German Wholesale Trade Agency) and the large plants to cover their supply on roller bearings, which they needed for the fulfillment of their export orders.

1. After the completion of the second quarter of 1954, the originally planned production program of the VEB Waelzlager works in Ronneburg was raised from 59,500 roller bearings to 70,000 retroactive to 1 January 1954. This indicated a forty percent production increase for the second half of the year. In spite of the production increase, the fulfillment of the first quarter was 105 percent, of the second quarter 103 percent and of the third quarter 94 percent. The 1954 production program was therefore 73.2 percent fulfilled by the end of September. By 31 October 1954 the production program for the entire year was already 101.3 percent fulfilled. 25X1
